In Her Own WORDS

The following essay was beautifully written by former camper Eliza Kettnering
(Pine Manor '24)

One hundred fifty girls standing on benches and scream singing 'Yellow Bird' is not 'happening quietly.' Those same girls banging their hands on tables to synchronized beats definitely isn't quiet. Laughing until you cry at 1 am with people you just met is never quiet, even when we tried to be. If you were to ask me one word to describe my experience at Camp Kamaji, 'quiet' wouldn't be my first thought. Or my second. Camp Kamaji is a place for girls ages seven to fifteen to try new activities, be silly, develop a true sense of self, and build strong, lifelong friendships.

I attended Camp Kamaji in Bemidji, Minnesota, for eight years. My very first summer, when I was only seven, I stayed eight weeks. A small, shy girl, far from home with people who were all very different, is bound to feel intimidated. There were girls older, louder, and more confident than me. I was only slightly terrified. However, after my first week as a 'Kami girl', I was a completely different person. I was loud, empowered, and a whole lot more confident.

Throughout my summers at Kamaji, the loud, boisterous moments were always the most apparent: scream singing at lunch, running to hug each other at the airport, or singing the words behind the stage for a younger camper who had forgotten the lyrics. What I never expected was how I would grow to treasure the quiet moments even more: reading together in a hammock during rest period, whispered conversations on the tennis courts under the stars, or waking each other up in the middle of the night to walk to the washhouse together.

To most, quietly reading together in an old, not-so-stable hammock would seem boring.

Late nights on the buggy tennis courts might sound miserable. Walking with someone to the bathroom isn't that extraordinary, and waking up in the middle of the night to do so is definitely not considered fun. However, it's these quiet moments that made the real difference in my friendships and in my life. The comfortable silence while reading together in a hammock is a pocket of peace hard to find in everyday life. The conversations, whether serious or silly, had with your newfound best friend while lying on the tennis courts, are unmatched. Something as unremarkable as waking your friend up at midnight to rush to the washhouse together is what builds lifelong friendships. What is particularly extraordinary is knowing that this person you just met two weeks ago won't hesitate to run with you through the pouring rain, just so you don't have to walk alone in the dark.

My time as a camper at Kamaji is now over, and I will never experience the quiet moments with those people the same way. Nevertheless, my life has been forever changed, experiencing the significance in the mundane and recognizing the extraordinary that happens with no more loudness than a whisper.

PROTECT THE BOUNDARY WATERS!
 TELL YOUR SENATORS: VOTE NO ON H.J. RES. 140

50 FRIENDS OF THE BOUNDARY WATERS
 ONWARD, TOGETHER!

A dangerous resolution is making its way through congress that could undermine crucial protections. Soon, congress will vote on House Joint Resolution 140—a resolution that would overturn the 20-year moratorium on mining on public lands near the Boundary Waters, handing over the reigns to foreign mining conglomerates Antofagasta and Glencore. This could affect future Kamaji canoe trips..

Contact your Senators NOW. Tell them to protect America's public lands and vote NO on H.J.R. 140.

TOP 5 REASONS TO RETURN AS AN LT:

1. An opportunity to be a Role Model to younger campers and handle real responsibility- earn respect.
2. Be back with your old camp friends and make connections with new friends- shared challenges/experiences/new memories create stronger lifelong friendships.
3. Builds skills colleges and future employers are seeking: Leadership, Initiative, Conflict Resolution, Teamwork, Independence from parents.
4. It is a summer when you can still enjoy the magic of camp- better yet, you are the magic-makers.
5. IT IS FUN! It feels good to be back in a place you love with people you adore, to teach Kamaji traditions and to feel how much you matter to our campers.
