ANNOUNCEMENTS

IMPORTANT!

WE ARE MOVING UP TO CAMP!

If you are mailing any forms or checks after May 1st- please send them to our summer address.

32054 Wolf Lake Rd
Cass Lake, MN 56633

Big Sisters!!

Reach out to your little sis again in May! Try to schedule a FaceTime or video call before camp!

Lincoln Oertel is SO excited to welcome her new Lil Sis to Kamaji!

Have a son?
Nearby Camp Chippewa will be hosting a similar program for the boys!

SPRING MAILING

KAT SNAIL-MAILED A LETTER WITH TIPS ABOUT HOW TO PREPARE FOR CAMP AND AN UPDATED PACKING LIST LAST WEEK. IT IS ALSO POSTED IN YOUR CAMPINTOUCH ACCOUNTS.

THERE IS A NEW STICKER INCLUDED! TAKE A PICTURE OF WHERE YOU PUT YOUR KAMAJI STICKER AND SEND TO US!

BIG NEWS

Do you have a friend or family member who is curious about the Camp Kamaji experience? We are thrilled to invite prospective families to experience the Northwoods magic firsthand at Kamaji Kickstart!

This day-camp weekend is the perfect "launchpad" for girls to try something new and build early confidence. While our full 4- and 8-week sessions are where the deepest lifelong friendships and traditions are truly forged, Kickstart offers a "taste" of camp life to help new families see if Kamaji is the right fit for them!

Save the Date:
June 27th/28th
July 25th/26th

No Cost to Attend-
Registration Required
Stay tuned for more Info.

FORMS FRIDAY

HAVE YOU BEEN KEEPING UP WITH KAT'S FRIDAY E-MAILS?

Be sure to keep up on the forms required for your camper! These are very important to us and timely completion is so appreciated!

KAMAJI KAPTURED

Fiona Belmonti and Sailor Mays are able to coordinate seeing each other over Spring Break in the Carribean!

New (Legacy) Camper, Rose Schieber created this camp-themed art and highlighted all the Kamaji campers in her fam: her mom, sister and cousins! (The Eldridge girls)

Reunion in Chicago: Orly Garfield (NYC), Sloane Storino, Evelyn Kras and Celeste Belmonti get ready for camp by having a sleepover together!

Cate Graziano & new camper, Marilyn Blom, performed in their Middle School's performance of "The Wizard of Oz"

Gold Star Camp Moms: Shannon Sword & Kate Joyce get together weekly to fill out camp forms. Forms Friday is more fun with FRIENDS!!

Camp Pals: Emma Harrison and Lizzie Joyce with furry friend, Violet hang out while their moms fill out forms together!!

JASON'S JOKE

Which month is the shortest?

MAY-IT ONLY HAS 3 LETTERS!

DID YOU KNOW?

The Ojibwe people in the Cass Lake area (part of the Leech Lake Band) hold a deep, historical connection to a special food that actually grows on top of the water—manoomin (wild rice).

Manoomin is technically a seed from a native aquatic grass, and it is a superfood that is incredibly nutritious and sacred to the Ojibwe culture.

Camp Kamaji is located on the traditional territory of the Leech Lake Band of Ojibwe. We honor their enduring presence, and as guardians of this natural space, we pledge to educate our community on our responsibility to this land and its original caretakers. We start this conversation at our first campfire of each session and have a moment of silence at the end of each weekly campfire to show respect for our surroundings and for all the people who walked the land before us.

THOSE NAGGING NERVES

I've only been a parent for 11 years. But I have been working alongside, with and for children since 2001. It is the 27 years of camp, the 11 years of being a mom and the fact that my own self-published monthly newsletter is sent out to hundreds of parents that I am now referring to myself as an "Expert". And I would encourage you to refer to me similarly.

I would like to use my status as a (Capital "e") Expert to share my thoughts about parenting, about kids, about camp, about community and maybe I'll insert a funny anecdote or two for you. But unlike other real parenting experts and legitimately trained psychologists, I am here simply to share the things I know from my own personal experiences and hopefully, frankly, to validate your own parenting decisions. I reserve the right to make glaring generalizations, to misquote statistics and to deny having said something you might find controversial, despite it being in print. And, unlike the algorithm on my Instagram feed, I will never, ever, make you feel guilty about what you're not doing or what you should be doing to raise happy children. With that, I proceed with my KAT talk (like TED, but so not):

As if all the concerts, plays, end-of year class parties and sports tournaments weren't enough (plus I just received a letter of "non compliance" because I forgot to send the school my kids' dental records)... you and your camper are surely experiencing a combination of excitement AND nerves for summer and camp.

That's normal!

Below are some of my tried and true suggestions for how to address your camper's nerves: (Hot tip: these can easily be adapted for use during other nerve-racking times such as starting a new school, trying a new activity or being invited to hang with a new group)

1. Validate her feelings and then talk through what specifically she is nervous about.

Then ask about what she is excited about. Reassure her those two feelings can be true at the same time. Avoid "rescue language." When our children express nerves or hesitation and WE are feeling similarly and maaaaaybe a lack of control, sometimes our fall-back is to give them an "out".

Examples of what NOT to say, there are many variations:

"If you don't think you can do it this summer, then you don't have to"

"Try it for a week and if you are still homesick, I'll come and get you"

Examples of what you could say instead:

"I totally hear you about being nervous. Even at my age, I still feel nervous when I'm doing something new!"

"Going away and doing all this is totally new, it's normal to feel nervous".

Sometimes excessive reassurance or creating an "escape hatch" unintentionally reinforces fear. Validate her nerves with calm confidence. Then you can verbal vomit all your fears to your spouse or best girlfriend...PRIVATELY.

2. Normalize nervousness, instead of trying to eliminate it.

Sometimes children (and adults) misinterpret nerves as a "red flag" and reason to not do something. Assure her she's not alone, share an anecdote of your own from when you were growing up. Remind her that most campers feel nervous about camp- even the ones who have been there before!

3. Speak confidently about camp.

Calm, steady confidence from parents is one of the strongest predictors of successful separation experiences. Remind her that you are partnering with camp/with Kat. That you have made this choice because you KNOW she can do it and what an incredible experience this will be for her. Remind her of the people she can talk to at camp: counselors, nurses, instructors and especially "camp mom" Kat!

4. Focus on what you know she is most excited about- do not over-focus on homesickness (or whatever your greatest worry might be) before camp begins.

Sometimes in an effort to prepare my own kid with tools for every single hypothetical situation or fear I have inside my brain, it backfires. Instead of helping them feel prepared and armed for whatever comes their way... it creates a mirrored anxiety. Reframe by focusing on capability, communication, friendships and opportunities.

PARENTS' BLOCK

5. Practice independence in small ways before camp.

You can actually SHOW your daughter how much you believe in her by practicing independence exercises like making her own lunch, asking for her advice when trying to make a decision, or give her an added responsibility she has been asking for. Not only will this give you great content to PROVE to her that you know how capable she is, but it is also reassuring to you!

6. Be honest, be comforting- don't be a fixer. Avoid making promises you may not keep.

Children are more likely to push through discomfort when the expectation is that they are capable of adapting. Don't goof and try to fix her nerves by promising she will feel better by the first full day of camp or that you'll come get her if she needs you. Kids tend to be quite literal, and while saying this makes YOU feel better, she is at camp on the 2nd day thinking, "I still miss home, that must mean something is wrong". Or she is in my office telling me, "I don't like it, this is hard, call my mom, I'm going home".

7. Help them identify excitement hidden inside anxiety.

The body experiences excitement and nervousness very similarly. Therapists often encourage reframing:

"That fluttery feeling might actually mean your brain knows something important and exciting is about to happen." Camp directors also say this a lot, but it sounds more impressive if a therapist says it.

8. Teach coping skills instead of trying to remove discomfort.

Children build resilience when adults help them tolerate emotions, not avoid them. Before camp, practice:

- deep breathing (Google finger tracing, box breathing and 4-7-8 breathing)
- positive self-talk: "cringe" at first but I love making up a mantra together.
- Sharing with a friend or peer about how you're feeling
- grounding techniques for anxious moments (Google 5-4-3-2-1 Sensory Method, body tensing or stomp, stomp, blow)

The goal is not "never nervous." The goal is "I can handle nervous feelings." It helps A LOT to give them an action item which helps them gain a sense of control of themselves and their feelings. (Psst. Note that this is being modeled for you now. 😊)

9. Do not interpret early homesickness as failure. In fact, campers should expect to miss home, have a disagreement with a friend, or have a bad day. Dwelling on homesickness is not great, but neither is idealizing the camp experience. Camp is real life. Talk about it as such! Growth often begins after the initial discomfort. Homesickness does not mean anything is wrong, it means this is new, it is a little scary, it is hard, AND, it's a signal to cue that growth and resiliency. We are exercising new muscles- it ALWAYS hurts at first!

10. Focus on who they are becoming, not just whether they are comfortable.

Remember, I am a mom of 3. I am a millennial (I am! Technically. It's close). And I say the following hard truth knowing that I am included: Modern parenting can unintentionally prioritize immediate comfort over long-term resilience. Yep. This is just one of the reasons you have chosen sleepaway camp for your daughter! Help your daughter also reframe: "This is not about having every moment feel easy. It's about discovering what you're capable of."

11. Remind daughters of past successes.

Confidence grows from evidence. Help girls remember times they overcame nerves before:

- first day of school
- sports tryouts
- sleepovers
- performances
- meeting new friends

12. Remember: confidence is built through experience, not before it.

This feels like a good time to remind her (and you!) confidence usually comes after doing something hard — not before. Camp is often one of the most important places where girls learn this lesson for themselves! Being brave is what she is doing: trying something new, feeling a little uncomfortable and doing it anyway. Whatever feelings she has while doing it are just that, her feelings. The feelings don't define her bravery. Her actions do.

Alright my friends. We good? You good. You got this. Now go forth and parent confidently!
